hours are long. Saturdays I frequently put in twenty hours, and some other days fifteen. This does not give a man suffirient rest. Then the work must be done standing, and to stand as many hours as we have to, though there was no labor at all attached to it, is enough to break down any man. But that is not the worst feature about it. The inhaling of foul breaths often causes diseases of the throat and lungs. The breath that some men have is awful. It is absolutely poisonous. A barber almost necessarily inhales these bad breaths and contracts disease thereby. I have made it a practice to stand at arm's length from my customers, and I thus avoid inhaling their breath to a great extent. This is not the common practice. however. The average barber bends over his man, and if he has a diseased breath he gets the full benefit of it. Yes sir " said he, with a sigh, and he turned to go Jones, of South Charleston, and Mr. J.
